

Di Lemma makes his house safe

Hi everyone at school this week our teacher taught us about house hazards and how to stay safe at home. Over the weekend I decided I would make my house a safe place to live.

Di Lemma woke up early on Saturday morning; he jumped out of bed and ran to the top of the stairs to listen to see if his mum was up. Di Lemma had to stop himself from tripping and falling down the stairs, he had left one of his roller boots at the top of the stairs. That could have caused a really nasty accident Di Lemma thought!!! Di Lemma moved his roller boot downstairs in the store cupboard where it belonged.

Once Di Lemma was downstairs he started to spot other hazards. He decided he would make his house safe for his whole family. Di Lemma started in the kitchen; he turned all of the electrical appliances off at the plug sockets. He then made sure all of the cupboards were shut properly so that no one could trip or walk into them. He made sure any sharp objects were in their proper places, he didn't touch any of these because he wasn't allowed because he was too young.

Di Lemma then moved into the front room. He had left his skateboard right in the middle of the room. He quickly picked it up and moved it into the shed, so that no one would trip over it.

When he was in the garden he noticed that the pond cover had blown off. He ran went inside to tell his dad, so that his dad could put it back on properly so that no one could fall in.

Di Lemma hadn't realised how many things you could hurt yourself on in your own house. He thought he had done a really good job making his house safe. He told his mum what he had done she was really pleased. She did point out one thing he had missed though. His dad had left his headache tablets on the side in the kitchen. Di Lemma told his dad he should be more careful because they could have fallen off and the dog could have eaten them, or someone could have thought they were sweets and eaten them. Di Lemma's dad moved the tablets and put them in the high cupboard with all the other medicine.

Di Lemma was happy now he thought the house was very safe.

Di Lemma says stay safe.

Bye till next time....

Can you help Di Lemma to fill in the missing words by working out the clues.
